Letter from a Wheeling Boy on the Same conscientious shopmen one finds at home. It was remarked very truy by a friend the other night when spearing in regard to the amount of rascally practiced in this vicinity, that if the after deserters, I find myself with brain and nerves sufficiently composed to again trouble you with an account of my seeings and doings in this vicinity. Of late, there having been quite a number of individuals who proposed, I am led to believe from the fact of Government Corralls being robbed of large numbers of horses, going finto-the Livery and Sales Stable business, I was instructed to investigate the matter, acting in the capacity of Special Inspector of the East subdistrict. With Inspector of the East subdistrict. With March 1866.

A Northern Estimate of the Confeders at Leaders.

We extract the following from a long we were in the New York Officien a Republican paper, edited by Citizen a Repub

The hotel mentioned is a more conficient on. The structure is of wood, beautifully carved with an ax the doing bandsomly pointed with mud, while Hogarths lines of beauty are displayed in profusion in the graceful and played in profusion in the graceful and symmetrical curfs assumed by the logs of Platte River mahogany, called by the yulgar cottonwood. under which failer worn bir by forgettible mess of cross babies, was here increased to a most alarming extent. Imagine my dismay when I found myself "vist a vis" with a young girl. She must have some place to put her feet, and so must I. From the crowded state of the couch this was a difficult matter.

Being the unfortunate possessor of a double amount of bashfulness, I sat with my knees drawn up to my chin, bearing, I doubt not, a close resemblance to a "bump on a log." The female did not appear to express the slightest concern in regard to, nor did she evince, a desire to releave me from my very uncomfortable and awkward position.

While reflecting whether or not I had better stop the conch and ride on the hurricane deck, I was impressed with the disagreeable fact that my tormentor did not use Sozdont. Hero was a pickle for a fastidious youth. Tinally reasoned the matter out this way: If a lady "don't" use a tooth brush, she "won't" care if I get on her toes. I at last let them down gradually, but on encountering her's, I was seized with a cold chill, and up they came. I gave Livery and Sales Stable business, I was instructed to investigate the mather, acting in the capacity of Special Inspector of the East subdistrict. With my transportation pass in my pocket and feeling like a very important and consequential personage, I proceeded to the Hotel of the great Overland Stage Line.

This is the line spoken of, and celebrated in the song called the Denver city line, on which a very notorious Jehu once drove mules, after a very romantic incident with a lady who peddled sarsaparillis.

The hotel mentioned is a most palating the folints because of the process of the platte. For Kearney is the state of the process of the platte. For the structure is of wood, beautifully carried with the song called the comment of the process of the platte. For the structure is of wood, beautifully carried with the same and the song palating the form of the southbank of the Lieuvenworth of same I am unable to discover, but I am inclined to think he died shortly after finishing this grand undertaking, and left it as a mounent to his undoubted scientific skill.

While waiting for the stage I was enabled to make a slight survey of my traveling companions, I mean the female portion, of which I noticed as goodly number, and upon closer observation found that the noises of youngsters in distress, proceeding from the adjoining room, were the property of some of the more matrouly looking. The "surface indications" for an uncomfortable sleepless night were elegant, and being backalorie in my temperament I was soon afflicted with a lung disgust.

Soon the stage arrived and fine large conches they are with their four power and endurance, which carry along their nearly looking. The "surface indications" for mounch of its being a mineral country, while here a stone the size of ones hand of purple and gold, is enveloped in huge folds of over coats, blankets, buffalo robse, furs and comforters, with his joily looking face, bronzed and toughened by cold and exposure to will become one of the flest probably by a "vigor" out and and sun and red nose with its color hightened probably by a "vigor" out spull" at the stomach bitter bottle; while with with for a scepter he commands obedience from his friends considerable water course between the considerable water course between the horses, and conflorters, with horses, and conflorters, with his joily looking face, bronzed and toughened by cold and exposure to will be considerable water course between the more than four effects of the standards we make comparisons, and this being the more than four effects of the mo

The river bed consists of an ever changing fuick sand, derived apparently from a peculiar kind of stone beneath the river bed, which upon exposure to atmospheric agencies, rapidly disintended and the river bed, which upon exposure to atmospheric agencies, rapidly disintended and the respective forms at a certain point, and to morrow it may be certain death. To overcome this great impediment to travel, Col. Carrington, 18th United States infantry, is making an attempt to bridge the riverant this point, so far successfully. The great difficulty to anything in the shape of improvements being the paucity and great expense of procuring timber.

At points allow, the river are inout, with willows and a stunted growth of timber. On Grand Island, which extends from Fort Kearney down sixty cover his great movement by the flank of the protecting the protecting unountains had followed our columns. But it may be doubted that any division commander has yet arisen to rival the splendid information of Jackson.

Jackson was the great infantry marches. But developed every hint from the South developed every hin mance, like Stuart's, made them, during war, the great saggestive captains. They built the first iron-clad, made the first of the great raids, and, under Stonewall Jackson, executed the earliest of the great infantry marches. But the colder adaptability of the North developed every hint from the South into a perfect system. The experiment of the Merrimac has grown to the Dictator, the Dunderberg and the Ironides. The engineering assiduity of Beauregard, imitated by the North, has marked the camps of our samiles, as if the protecting mountains had folhar yet arisen to rival the spiendid infantry genius of Jackson.

Jackson was the great captain or aggressive warfare. He combined the cunning and boldness of Napoleon. To cover his great movement by the flank in 1852, he did not hesitate to fight Pope's whole army with a division, and the celerity of his march up the Shenandoah, to appear again on the field of Bull Run, was only equalled by the energy of his attack. He moved infantry with the speed of horse, and having hurled three great commanders back from the Old Dominion, died before the lustre of its arms had diminished in the flush of victory, when rebellion had assumed, indeed, the proportions of a nation. He was the most Republican of rebels, stern and simple as any Roundhead, and this is why we hold his memory greener than that of his companions, whose defections to the Union was augmented by their treason to popular institutions. There were other personages, identified with this grand historical defence, but these are the great statures—Davis, Lee, Jackson, Start.
